DEMOCRATIC GEMS FROM TEXAS.

Judge Ireland, the present chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee of Texas, and also State Senator, said in a speech made during the last canvass: "I hate the United States flag, and I will teach my children to hate it."

At the recent Democratic Congressional Convention, in Texas, one of the leading Democratic lights, named French Smith, said, in a speech at Goliad: "I love to kill Indians, but I would rather kill one nigger than two Indians."

Coke, the presen. Democratic Governor of Texas, in one of his first campaign speeches, in alluding to the cold-blooded murder of a State policeman, who was shot while sitting in a barber's shop i: Coke's town, Waco, said: "I know many citizens of Waco felt good when they heard of it, and, fellow-citizens, I felt good too."

These brief quotations are painfully significant. If a prominent judge hates the United States flag and teaches his children to hate it, and is yet sustained by the State government and public sentiment in his official capacity, then farewell to patriotism in Texas.

If leading Democrats openly avow an exquisite pleasure in killing negroes and Indians the tastes and pastimes of the party must not only be peculiar, but their morals would seem to be very much below the ordinary Democratic standard.

And if the Democratic Governor Coke "feels good" over the murder of a fellow-citizen and neighbor, to what height has the pleasure of his Democratic friends in the State risen over the murder of six hundred victims since the Governor was elected?

A correspondent, in a letter from Austin, Texas, dated October 3, 1874, says: "Never since the surrender has there been as much treason openly advocated as during the past few weeks. To-day there are counties in this section defying the authorities."

We leave the reader to make his own comments.

PROGRESS—PAST AND FUTURE.

We have sometimes heard it irreverently said that the Father of his Country was an able man considering the day and generation in which he lived, but that now he would not be accounted much because he knew nothing of railroads, telegraphs, nor of the thousands of modern inventions which are the results of scientific research. As a logical argument, of course, the above remark is open to many criticisms, for he was all the greater for accomplishing what he did without the aid of modern appliances, and had he lived in this age he would be among the first to appreciate the wonderful inventions of the present century. But the remark concerning the ignorance of Washington suggests what may be said of the people of this generation a hundred years hence.

The spirit of invention and discovery has been wonderfully active during the past seventy-five years, but its developments are so gradual that they make but little impression upon our minds. But could one of the early settlers of Jamestown, or Pemaquid, or Plymouth, or even of Penns valley, return to earth and witness the wonderful triumphs of invention since his time, he would be overwhelmed with astonishment.

Thorne, who was released from imprisonment at Thomaston, Maine, a year or two ago, after having been incarcerated almost thirty years, although he had heard and read of locomotion by steam and of other modern discoveries, yet his curiosity was very much excited when he first saw a train of cars propelled by the power of steam. A prisoner was recently released from the Connecticut State Prison, who was committed previous to the building of railroads in that State, and when taken to the station to be sent home, he spent several days hanging around the depot watching with wonder the movement of the trains.

It was Sir Walter Scott who visited London in 1808, and wrote home that a foolish German was advocating the possibility of lighting the streets by means of coal gas. The idea to the mind of the gifted poet seemed wild and chimerical, but it was not long before the dream of the German was realized, and the poet acknowledged his skepticism.

The great masses of the people were equally skeptical with regard to the application of steam for purposes of locomotion and of electricity for transmitting intelligence, but the whole process seems simple enough now, and the wonder is that these great secrets had not sooner been unlocked.

But perfection has by no means been reached, and we have seen the realization of so many marvelous things in our own day that we may be well satisfied that others equally wonderful are to follow. We can anticipate some of these, for they involve only the perfection of instrumentalities over which we already have partial control, while the bare announcement of others would startle us and prove as great a strain on our credulity as the idea of illuminating the streets of the English metropolis by means of coal gas, was to Sir Walter Scott. When Prof. Morse first suggested the telegraph to Congress, the entire wisdom of the nation laughed him to scorn, but his day of triumph was not long postponed. From the position which we have already gained we can see the broad plane of ignorance and superstition below, but the top is not yet reached.

In the useful arts there is much to be accomplished yet, and the inventive mind in search of new realms to conquer, is not distined to disappointment. Types are yet to be set by machinery and enable authors to become their own compositors. Aeronautics has not yet been reduced to a science, but great progress has been made in the art of navigating the air within the last few years.

The application of steam is a great discovery, but invention is already at work to discover some gaseous substance which shall be cheaper and easier of application and less dangerous than steam. Who can tell how soon it will be found? An Italian has invented a machine by which telegrams can be dispatched in the handwriting of the sender, and this process will doubtless ere long be simplified so as to come into general use. The subtile science of psychology will probably be much better understood some day than it now is, and modern spiritualism may yet be satisfactorily explained as the operation of natural laws.

The domain of nature is broad and ample and there is scarcely any limit to men's capabilities, especially when these are quickened by necessity. We are a wasteful people because there is no necessity for our being otherwise. We are wasteful of food because we have an abundance of it, but our posterity will be obliged to forego many of the luxuries that we enjoy and will condemn us as a half-civilized people, on account of our ignorance and extravagance. Our ignorance, notwithstanding our boasted light and knowledge, will appear to the people of the future as that of the past appears to us. Science and knowledge are progressive and perfection will only be reached in the far distant future.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, October 31, 1874.

THE CENTENNIAL.

In addition to the 21 nations of the earth that have excepted the invitation from the United States to take part in the International Exhibition, I have now to announce to your readers, that South Australia, New South Wales, New Zealand, and Queensland have favorable entertained a proposition for a combined representation, and it is very probable that Tasmania, Western Australia and Victoria will unite with them, and be represented at the Centennial as one grand Australian court.

The jasper, chalcedony, opal and the pebles of gold-bearing quartz—with which the garden walks of the wealthy are frequently ornamented, the Acacias, the gum tree, 200 feet in length, the birds of surpassingly beautiful plumage and the quadrupeds of Australia, some of which have long been regarded, upon account of their external form and anatomical structure, as forming a connecting link between birds and animals—will form one of the most pleasing features of our Grand Exhibition.

The Emperor of Brazil will visit the Exhibition in state, in one of his own war ships. He thus writes: I intend to visit the United States on the occasion of the Centennial anniversary, but it will be necessary for me to obtain permission from my parliament to leave my empire."

But after all, nothing is more gratifying to the few gentlemen who, almost unaided and alone, have carried the Great Exhibition along for two years against the flood tide of a nation's prejudice, than the words of cheer which are now daily reaching them.

The following is a fair sample of the feeling now existing in the hearts of the American people and I give it as illustrative of the encouragement given to the Finance Commissioners.

Columbia, Tenn. Oct. 17, 1874.

HON. FRED FRALEY:

Treas. Centennial Board of Finance.

Dear Sir:—Please find ten dollars currency for which send Certifiate of Centennial stock. I wish I could take ten shares instead of one, but my means are limited, and being a farmer I labor under the disadvantages of an almost entire failure of a crop this year; still as a Tennessecan I am anxious to have my name enrolled as a contributor.

Signed: Joshua B. Frierson.

Count Julius Daunfelt, the Sweden commissioner to the Exhibition, writes from Stockholm under date of October 5th: I have secured from my government: First, free freights for all exhibited articles from this place and back again, if not sold at the exhibition. Second, free boxes, cases, or tables necessary for the suitable display of articles. Third, free journey to Philadelphia and return for all workmen and experts required to take charge of Swedish machinery and products. Fourth, a guarantee against damage by fire or shipwreck as far as such may be obtained by means of insurance.

I mention what the government of far off Sweden intends doing for the exhibitors from that nation for the purpose of showing your readers the great interest taken in the Centennial abroad and of arousing the American people to the importance of taking immediate action in the matter of exhibiting the productions of home industry and genius so that we may fairly enter into competition with the older nations of the world.

THE PARTY.

There is no disguising the fact that in this city, the year 1874 appears to bear a plentiful crop of "bolters;" and just what the result of it will be upon the general ticket of the State, or city, is a factor that passes the united comprehension of John Miller, and Russell Errett, with the acumen of Lewis C. Cassidy and William B. Mann to aid them. In the first congressional district, Chapman Freeman is the candidate for congress of the regular Republicans; David Branson is running in the same district as the candidate of the "antlers" and "camp followers" of the same party. Opposed to these two candidates is Hon. Thos. B. Florence, a journalist whose heart is as big as his body and whose purse is always in his hand to aid the distressed.

In the third district—Hon. Samuel J. Randall's—David Houston is the regular candidate of the Republicans, nominated in accordance with party usages; while Benjamin L. Berry is the irregular candidate, irregularly nominated by the "outs." As Berry will about equally divide the Republican vote with Houston, there can be no question as to Randall's return to Congress.

In the fifth district the Democratic nominee is John Robbins, whom Alexander Henry defeated for Mayor of the city by a majority of 850 only.

Against Mr. Robbins the regulars of the party have nominated Hon. Alfred C. Harmer, present member, and the "Modocs," as they are called, have put forward Hon. Leonard Myers, also a present member, who, by the last apportionment, was thrown into the same district with Harmer.

A careful survey of the congressional contest leads me to observe that it is not at all improbable that the triangular contest in this district may determine the political complexion of the next House of Congress.

In the third legislative district—Hon. Samuel Joseph's for 13 consecutive years—are two legislative candidates running upon the Democratic side, each claiming to be regularly nominated, and each having a full executive committee in his interest. A Republican will probably be elected in this district.

In the fifth district there were also two Democratic candidates running, which will also throw this district into the hands of the Republicans.

In the ninth district it is reversed, for here there are two Republican candidates quarreling over the prize which to my mind must thereby fall into the hands of the Democrats.

The contentions existing in the legislative districts about equalize themselves between the two parties, and the delegates from this city, on joint ballot, will probably stand 38 Republicans and 8 Democrats. A gain of one Democratic Congressman seems certain, while so far as the candidates for city offices are concerned, the war that is being waged between the Cassidy-Ludlow factions will result in a severe loss to the Democrats and consequently a corresponding gain to the Republicans. The Municipal Reformers, as a distinct organization exists only in the imagination of a dozen antiquated gentlemen who now and then go through the farce of issuing an address. This year, contrary to all former precedents, they have made no nominations. All they have done has been to enumerate Man(n's) vices, and ask their fellow reformers if they will elect him to a sixth term as district attorney; they held but one public meeting during the campaign, which must have convinced even the reformers that as a "bob" to the tail of either party they will never knock any body as high as they have elevated themselves by their exclusiveness, selfishness, and utter ignorance of politics.

Their mission seems to be to create dissensions in both parties by which the "roosters" of either party are continually enabled to elect themselves to office; they remind me of the big boy at school, who, while he wouldn't fight the plucky little fellow, about half his size, said, "I won't fight you but I'll make mouths at your sister."

THE READING COMPANY'S BLUNDER.

The parsimony practised by the management of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company in the discharge of a large number of employees, the reduction of the labor wages of those retained, and the continual failure to supply a sufficient number of cars to carry the coal mined, to the market, is chiefly due the purchase of the 90,000 acres of coal and iron ore lands by the company. That purchase required the sum of $26,000,000 which had to be obtained on loan. The discount to which the company was compelled to submit makes the interest on the same, average 8 per cent. per annum, or more than $2,000,000 a year. To pay this large interest account requires $5,500 for each day of the year, and as the closest economy fails to make up that sum the company is rapidly rasing the price of coal upon consumers. Since the Reading Company entered the market, two years ago, as a retail dealer in coal they have advanced the rates two dollars a ton with every indication of advancing it still another dollar before the first of March next. It is just about as well for every housekeeper, who has a coal stove, as well as every manufacturer who uses coal, to know, that unless the Reading Company has a profit of nearly three dollars a ton on the coal they mine they cannot pay expenses and carry to the sinking fund account the amount required by the English mortgagees of the company.

In purging the assessment lists in this city it has been ascertained that about 7,000 people were on the registry of voters whom the Court of Common Pleas concluded must "step down and out" from these lists.

For the information of those of your readers who insure against loss by fire I have to state, that the State Insurance Company of Bangor, Maine, had judgment recorded against them in the sum of $4,157.50, This was the amount of two policies the companies refused to satisfy until forced to do so by the courts.

The centennial of the birth of Daniel O'Connell will be celebrated in Dublin, in great style next year. Many of our Celtic friends will cross the briny water, especially if the American line of steamers plying from this port to Liverpool, continues to carry passengers for $11. per head.

Col. A. K. M'Clure has been so busily engaged lecturing to religious audiences that he has had no time whatever to devote to politics during this campaign. Since turning religionward politics with him seems to be one of the "lost arts."

Christian K. Ross is improving in health; he has lucid intervals of an hour or two at a time, and is gaining in mental and bodily strength. The search for poor little Charlie seems to have been almost abandoned, except by a few detectives.

Hon. Benjamin Harris Brewster, Attorney General under Gov. Geary, and Theo. Cuyler, Solicitor for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, became engaged in an altercation in court; during the week Mr. B. called Mr. C. a "nuisance" because he wasn't ready to try a case, and Cuyler told B. to "cheese it" as he was a liar. Blows would have followed angry words if the tipstaves hadn't interfered. Justice, who is said to be blind, saw the quarrel through the eyes of Judge Lynd, who find the barristers $100 each for contempt of court. Mr. Brewster responded, "for the satisfaction of calling Cuyler a scoundrel, a villian and a nuisance, I will pay that fine cheerfully." These things help to reduce our city debt but coming from such distinguished gentlemen in so sacred a place, seem to teach us that ordinary men must look elsewhere than to eminent lawyers for examples of that docility of temper which they are engaged in teaching mankind the penalties for not practising. I never saw a brew stir up the court so seriously as this affair did.

Thirty-two selections, averaging about fifty lines each, have been made from "Thayer's Theology of Universalism, and these will be inserted in a "daily paper which has a circulation of 55,000 copies," and paid for as advertisements.

—A fire at Plymouth, Pa., 29th ult., destroyed Jessop's Hotel, the livery stables of Davenport & Blair, the barn of A. S. Davenport (with twenty tons of hay), the barn of J. B. Smith (with sixty tons of hay), D. Mullins' shoe store, the dwellings of A. Lee, Daniel Huntsman and H. Lewis, and Van Loon's store and hall. The total loss is one hundred thousand dollars; insurance not over six thousand dollars.

—At eleven-thirty, A. M., Oct. 29, fire was discovered issuing from the roof of the drying house connected with the Barrel Works at Oil City. The drying house contained about two hundred and fifty thousand staves, was located only five feet from the main works and was completely surrounded by large piles of staves. The remarkable efforts to save the surroundings and the stock were finally successful, and at two o'clock the fire was under control. The loss will foot up about twelve thousand dollars and is covered by insurance.

TRUTH AND FALSEHOOD.

AN ALLEGORY.

JOHN J. SAXE.

Set to a tale well worth the ear,
Of all who wit and sense admire,—
Invented—it is very clear—
Some ages prior to Matthew Prior.

Falsehood and truth "upon a time,"
One day in June's delicious weather,
('Twas in a distant age and clime)
Like sisters, took a walk together.

On, on their merry way they took,
Through fragrant wood and verdant meadow,
To where a beech beside a brook
Invited rest beneath its shadow.

There, sitting in the pleasant shade,
Upon the margin's grassy matting,
(A velvet cushion ready made)
The young companions fell to chatting.

Now while in voluble discourse
On this and that their tongues were running,
As habit bids each speaks, perforce,
The one is frank; the other cunning.

Falsehood, at length, impatient grown
With scandals of her own creation,
Said, "Since we two are quite alone,
And nicely screened from observation—

Suppose in this delightful rill,
While all around is so propitious,
We take a bath!"—said truth, 'I will,—
A bath, I'm sure will be delicious."

At this her robe she cast aside,
And in the stream that ran before her
She plunged—like Ocean's happy bride—
As naked as her mother bore!

Falsehood at leisure now undressed,
Put off the robes her limbs that hamper,
And having donned Truth's snowy vest,
Ran off as fast as she could scamper!

Since then the subtile maid, in sooth,
Expert in lies and shrewn evasions,
Has borne the honest name of Truth,
And wears her clothes on all occasions.

While Truth disdaining to appear
In Falsehood's petticoat and boddice,
Still braves all eyes from year to year,
As naked as a marble goddess!

"PUT YOUSELF IN HIS PLACE."

BY PHOEBE CARY.

O, men, who are good, who are honored, and great,
Be kind to your brother of lowly estate;
If masters, then be not in tasking severe;
If rulers, then rule men in love and not fear;
And if ye be fathers, wise learned and strong,
Lead the little ones tenderly, slowly along;
Ere you sneer at the humble, or punish the base,
Pause and think for awhile, "Put yourself in their place!"

Fair lady, so haughty, so chaste, and so cold,
Kept safely from harm in love's sheltering fold;
Ere you turn from your frail, erring sister with scorn,
Think how she was tempted, and how she was born;—
Her ruin may date from a smile or kind word,
The first that her poor hungry heart ever heard
Then pause, ere you taunt her with sin and disgrace—
How if you had been tried! "Put yourself in her place!"

Proud men, whom the white robes of ermine enfold,
As you weigh other's sins in the balance you hold;
Ere you crush the last spark in a heart doomed to bleed,
Let mercy come in for a moment and plead:
Ere you sentence "for life," a poor brother to dwell,
With the ghosts of the sins that shall people his cell,
Think why you are honored, and he in disgrace;
What is hid in your heart! "Put yourself in his place!"

"Put yourself in their place!" Yea have mercy on all,
Who through love or through hate, good or evil shall fall;
Who knows in the light of a judgment divine,
Which soul shall be whitest, the sinner's or thine!
Fear to judge, least you stand at the heavenly door,
To see harlots and publicans go in before,
While you cover with guilty confusion your face,
And cry, when too late, to be put in their place!

ONLY A WHILE.

Only a little while to work,
And a long, long time to rest;
Then drive the cloud from the aching brow,
The sigh from the troubled breast.

Up, with a strong and hopeful heart;
Up, with a sunny face;
Shouldering your troubles cheerfully;
Bear them with patient grace.

Only a while the feet must bleed,
And the burdened back must bend;
Suffer in silence and silently,
Help others who suffer, friend.

Only a while our tears must drip,
Drop after drop, like rain;
And our lips grow white with pain of heart,
The very god of pain.

Only a little while,
As short as the going down
Of the setting sun, to meekly bear,
The cross and the thorny crown.

Only a while to watch and pray,
And a long, long time to praise;
Our God, our Father knoweth best,
Then question not His ways.

Only a little while to sow,
And a long, long time to reap;
Let's sow in faith with an open hand,
And tares from the good seed keep.

Only a little time to loose,
All eternity to find,
The jewels of death has robbed us of,
The friends we will leave behind.

Only a while to trim our lamps,
Ere the Bridegroom passeth by;
Then fill them well with the oil of Love;
Let the flames rise pure and high.

Only a while—what matter it
If our life be short or long!
If we only sing a few short notes
Of the whole of the changing song?

The missing notes will all be found,
And the song be wholly sung,
In Heaven where God's own hand will tune
The harps He has unstrung.

BUFFUM'S FIGHT.

BY NED ARLO.

They fit and fit, and gouged and bit,
And struggled in the mud,
And all the ground for miles around,
Was kivered with his blood—
And piles of noses, ears and eyes,
And hills and mountains reached the skies."

'Are that a fact, Bill?'

'It are, and the way I won the female were this—I fout for her like Washington did for liberty, and do say naturally b'ed!'

'Tell us about it,' said Tom Scop.

'I will,' said Billy.

And then taking a chew of tobacker, he commenced:

'You see Sally Birch hankered after me astonishing until a foreign feller arriv in our settlement, trigged out in 'store close' and fancy fix ups, and then she commenced to lean!—'Creation!' sez I to myself, and felt as though I had the bumfujjins—and swore! Now, that gal were the most beautiful gizzard ticklin, she female that ever get outer bed to scratch and turn over. She was as graceful as a hollihock, her eyes twinkled like dimuns, and her breath was as sweet as prare flower. Hush!—whenever I'd see her 'propel' it would make me yearn for matrimony hypercattewamdassly—and one day says I, Bill Buffum, you must either marry that gal—rite strate—or bust your biler! Well:

'Shortly afterwards this ere foreign feller 'come to town,' to knock my happiness all into flinders and introduce foreign fashions on a republican soil. He was a hairy looking circumstance—a barber—with whiskers over his lip, who traveled around the country establishing 'mustachers' and pedling rose water. It was as I expected. Wash me under a hogshead of pork if Sally didn't take a notion to the varmint rite off, just because she allowed he was from the Emporium of Fashion, and 'cavorted' amongst Metropolitan society. (That wan't the word he used. I reckon it means the same thing.)

'Well, gentlemen, I tell you I felt quite hostill and warm at this state of affairs, and for fear I would mult and run away into oil, I went down to the creek, to 'shed flannel and cool off.' While I laid there, like Moses in the bulrushes, amongst the weeds and water snaix, and yeller flies a buzzin, I happened to hear a noise and looked up. Would you believe me—I hope I may never eat any wedding cake if warn't Sally tripping down the wagon track—bare-legged with her shoes and stockings in one hand and a bar of soap in the other hand, a pintin rite for the creek where I was, and for the same particular purpose, too! Now, being mighty modest I turned my eyes and riz, and flopped behind some bushes, and got my 'duds' on uncommon sudden! When I came out Sally seed me, and blushed like a biled lobster, and commenced so scratch the ground with her toze. I swar, gentlemen, she never looked so enticin before.

'So I walked up to her and tuck her hand, and ses I to her ses I 'Sally,' and just then I happened to look down towards the earth, and I hope to be shot, if there warn't——Jeruselum! how skared I war!

"As I was sayin ses I to Salley ses I —'You know I dream of you powerful! You have run into my affection just like a steamboat into a sand bank—and can't be got loose!—Now, if you'll only say yes we'll positively trot over to the squire's next Sunday, and hitch teams, and be jest about the happiest pair in creation.' Sally shut her eyes at this announcement, and gin a sigh as sweet as a mocking-bird's whistle, and trembled! I diskivered my language were taken effect, and I continued to pile on the agony quite solemn-cholicism. 'My angel,' ses I 'you are as pure as a robbin bird, and beautiful as a morning glory, and I feel as if you were made for me—sure! But if you elope with that ere limber-jinted old hay-hooking turkey-buzzard what have been proposin to you lately, I shall knock him down, kill him, and then kill myself. Why, Sally, in a week he will turn you off like a billy-goat would poetry, and most likely you'd fetch up like the last of huckle-berry time.

'Do you think so?' said Sally.

'In course I do,' said I.

'Me too,' ses she, 'for last nite the mean thing 'sulted me—just as true as I stand here—and said because I was bow-legged he reckoned I could ride on two horses—easy.'

'Gentlemen, when I heerd that ere, my jacket riz on my back like a tent-cloth, and I jist took an awful oath I'd ruinate that barber—and felt hot! So kissed Sally twice, and sed 'ole Reservoir' to her, which means in French, 'good-by,' and lumbered.

"Just as I wheeled around Sally's daddy's house—forninst old Mammy McKee's—there was the durned gander-legged scoundrel, puttin' in quite smart for the village, like a monkey to see Sally I imagined, but on diskivering me he turned on his heel to luff! I followed him up, however, to the swamp, where the cane drifted, when I told him to halt, for I was determined he should either fite or run? Ses he 'don't approach me, and with that he pulled out a big hoss-pistol, and allowed he'd blow out my gizzard. I did'nt wait to see if he would or not, but let him have one wang along side of the smellin organ, and then lit on him! Biff! biff!—he gave to me in the ribs,—slam! bang! I gave to him in the eye—and the way his head buzzed and I flew around were a caution to buffaloes!

"Now, the barber had on a bobtailed monkey jacket, which he esteemed amazin' and said it was fashion's finishin' touch; so we had it—I hold of his bobtail, and he hold of my hair tryin' to jerk me out of my trowsers. Then followed a bitin' of smellers, nippin' pieces outer one another—and lettin' 'o' em drap! Eyes, ears, and noses laid around in big heaps, and the universe was kivered with blood! Fact, true as thunder!

"Well, we fit around and about, until I run the varmint's head in the mud, when I observed a hole in the seat of his pantaloons, what had worn through, so I jest sot my dental arrangements to work, and took hold of a good mouthful, when the feller jerked his head out of the mud, bollered, 'Enough,' and said he'd confess stealin' Mammy McKee's spoons!

"Well, I hope I may never be elected to Congress, if this good for nothin' cuss hadn't been over to the old woman's a speakin' of her daughter Mary Ann, and stole all her silver spoons and sugar tongs—for I found 'em directly after hid away in his boots! So I jest totes Mr. Barber down to Squire Smith's and sure enough he had recently escaped from prison up beyond Bamboozle Village for cow stealin.'

"That's the way I won Sally Birch. Now whose my frind—I want a chew of tobacker."

SCORCHING A SCOTCHMAN.

A century ago, Scotchmen were the "merchant princes" of Richmond, Virginia. That race is of hospitable fame, and right royally was the national reputation maintained by the Richmond representatives of that ancient day. But a generation ago, the glory of the great Scotch merchants had departed, with a few exceptions. It may here be remarked that the kindly Scottish heart not only 'warms to the tartan,' but the sound of the home tongue as well. Scotchmen never lose their clannish love for a "brither Scot," whatever else may be lost to them, no matter where he may be met.

Among the genial-hearted Scotchmen in Richmond, say thirty years ago, was John Barr, a wealthy and much-esteemed citizen, who was largely interested in coal property, and carried on an extensive business in that time. He was a widower, with two charming and accomplished daughters, who presided at his hospitable masion.

It will not do to omit mention of "Our House" a "public," as Meg Dodds would term it, famous for its fine liquors and general good cheer,—located on 13th street, and under the charge of Charlie Thompson. Now, in those days, at least, a hot whiskey punch was considered the natural beverage, in moderation, for a full-blooded Scotchman. For that matter, this is not altogether obsolete, even now. And as Scotchman Barr owned the building where Charlie Thompson dispensed his liquors and savory solids, it was but natural that "Our House" should be the main fountain at which the constitutional Scotch thirst should be slacked, when the stroke struck the right hour, say about 11 o'clock A. M., for the first devotions. And so, in a very calm, orderly, uniform way, the days and nights of John Barr moved on, without even a ripple of unusual things, until one eventful day which came bigger which events to the unsuspecting coal merchant than often came down upon that moral and peaceable city. It began without a cloud, but there was much hidden thunder in that sky.

One day, as good John Barr was sipping his punch, in the handsome room where "Our House" beverages were dispensed and partaken, his quick ear caught the pleasant sound of a Scotch tongue, calling for the national concoction at the bar. The party, upon whom the eyes of Mr. Barr were instantly turned, was a large, imposing, well-dressed gentleman of about sixty years. He was evidently a stranger, no common person, and a Scotchman,—the last the best of all. He took his drink like a gentleman, paid for it like a gentleman, bowed like a gentleman, and retired like a gentleman. Who was this gentleman?

The next day, at about the same hour, this now distinguished stranger again appeared at "Our House," took his tod, paid, bowed, and went his way. Promptly on the third day came the mysterious but most interesting gentleman; but he was in less haste than before, and rested himself upon a chair, or whatever was the seat at hand. That John Barr should be eager to open a chat with this unknown brother Scot; that he succeeded in this; and that they should take "a little something" jointly and severally—was just inevitable. To say that the stranger proved to be a very pleasant man, would be unjust to the subject. He was simply fascinating. Evidently of much cultivation, he had also traveled extensively in many parts of the world, and had that air of refinement and dignity, which indicated habitual association with educated society. And so, the ice once broken, there followed daily chats between the two Scotchmen, that soon partook of intimacy; and it naturally and easily ripened into this in a short time. This charming human addition to the social life of honest and unsophisticated John Barr was named Campbell,—of the pure blood of that famous stock, which is the pride of every true Scotchman. His business was that of a tobacco dealer; for the purchase of which valuable vegetable he was now in Richmond, in the interest of the large New York house, of which he was the principal. He expected to spend an indefinite time in Richmond, which fact gave much satisfaction to Mr. Barr. And so, without effort or study (apparently), the two soon became close friends. In a short time, Campbell was a frequent and familiar lounger in the office of Barr; and finally, a visitor at his house,—where many an hour of genial comfort was passed by the twain.

The close friendship which we thus see established was cemented even more strongly, by an event which occurred—say some three months after their first acquaintance. Now, although John Barr was one of the most quiet and amiable of men, yet he had nerves and was sensitive. As Campbell was taking his ease in Barr's office one day, conversation ensued which will explain a certain important matter.

'What's the trouble, John? You are fidgety, man. Anything gone wrong?'

'Wrong! why, I was to have received drafts this morning, with which I was to pay notes, and now I've got to go out to borrow money; and I hate to borrow.'

'Pshaw! What's the use of fretting about that?'

'Fretting!' exclaimed John, now finding vent for his irate steam. 'Fretting! If you hated to borrow money as I do, you would know, sir, what's the use of fretting." And the coal merchant hopped to and fro, briskly.

'Poh! nonsense, man. How much?'

'Five thousand dollars, I suppose.'

'Is that all?'

'All!' And the excited gentleman paused in surprise, at such a question.

'Yes; because I can let you have five thousand dollars—or fifteen thousand for that matter—if you want it.'

Now, our estimable friend of the black diamond, neither considered nor cared whether his dear friend Campbell had five dollars, or five thousand. In that kindly heart, no such selfish thoughts had intruded. The companionship had given him new and grateful pleasure, and he was satisfied with that. If, then, Campbell came very near to his bosom as a friend, how would he seem, when he not only had five thousand but fifteen thousand dollars to loan to his friend? The reader will readily see how Campbell advanced in Barr's regard, when he gave his check for five thousand dollars on the Bank of Virginia, with the assurance that he was in no haste to have the sum returned, as he was not buying very heavily just then. The money was repaid the next day, but the generous aid was faithfully and gratefully remembered.

And, in this intimate way, matters progressed. Campbell attended all the great sales at the tobacco warehouses, bid on very large lots; was often seen hurrying from one warehouse to another with bundles of leaf samples under his arm, and came to be considered a very heavy dealer. In after months, however, although all recollected his bidding cautiously, nobody remembered of his buying a single pound.

By and by, Campbell's transaction required large sums of money. Sometimes his drafts failed to come in time; but the ample deposits of Barr were all at his service, and occasionally used. From time to time, as Barr wanted money, or Campbell needed it, their checks were promptly given. Campbell always had money to loan when Barr chanced to require it, and he was exact in repaying what he borrowed. All the while the convivial sunniness of life, which Barr so loved, and which Campbell so greatly increased, went on until the latter became a part of the former's everyday comfort. This state of things had continued about a year. One morning, however, Campbell failed in his regular visit to Barr's counting room. There was nothing surprising in this, only it broke out a great piece of Barr's daily necessities. Campbell had become a part of his very existence.

And so Barr fretted and fidgeted, and finally went home in much solitude and discomfort. All the next day there was no Campbell. As the shades of evening fell, Barr dispatched a note by a servant, addressed to Campbell at his boarding-house, tendering any assistance in his power, in case he was confined by sickness. Of course Campbell must be sick.

What else could possibly keep him but that? But, judge of his emotions, if you can, when word was brought that Campbell had settled his bill for board, taken his luggage, and left for parts unknown, two days before! And Campbell, at that moment, had twenty-two thousand dollars of Barr's money in his possession. If there ever was "a pretty kettle of fish," did not John Barr have it, when that horrid news froze his very blood, metaphorically speaking?

It would be useless to dwell upon the condition of poor Barr's lacerated soul. In fact, he didn't pause long over it himself. Twenty-two thousand dollars was a sufficient sum to put all sentimentalism to flight. Inquiries were at once set on foot, but neither policeman, nor railroad official, nor any one, had seen the fugitive moving towards distant parts. In this quandary, it was doubtful whether the pursuit should move to the South, or the North. Finally, Barr started northward, after his treacherous and fugative friend or enemy. At Washington, not the least clew or trace of Campbell could be found. At Baltimore it was equally obscure; but the suggestion that pursuit southward would now be useless, Barr concluded to push on. Philadelphia could give no aid, and he started for New York about hopeless of success, and with a heart of lead.

Arrived at New York, the afflicted gentleman proceeded at once to the office of the famous "Old Hays," then at the head of the police of that city. Inquiries were made of all officers who might know of such a man's arrival as Barr was hunting, but not a word of hope could they give. Old Hays finally advised that inquiry should be made of a certain firm of professional detectives. He said that sort of business was just in their line, and they would be much more likely to know anything that could be learned of the case than the regular police-force would. It was night. Poor John Barr had been racked with anxiety and without rest or sleep, for two days and nights. Not one ray of hope had come to cheer him. That he should seek the firm of detectives, rather from desperation than a belief that any good might come of it, may well be believed.

Reaching the office he sought, a short, square built, grave man, about 40 years of age, was found there; and the moment he heard Barr's inquiry, he answered:

'All right, sir. Campbell arrived here two days ago. He has been absent a long while; and, as it was full time for him to finish any job on hand, we have been on the lookout for him for several weeks. The moment he arrived we put a man on him. He staid at a boarding house one day, and yesterday moved to another. He is there now.'

A flood of great joy made Barr speechless. Recovering, he proposed to march at once upon the enemy, and capture him.

'Softly, Mr. Barr,' said the detective. 'Campbell is sharp, and no fool, to be caught so easy as that. If we go now, we will lose him, sure. You just keep cool, and let us work this out. We know our man.'

At this John Barr rebelled. He couldn't see why an arrest should not be made, instanter. He didn't want Campbell now, so much as he did once; but he wanted that twenty-two thousand dollars, there and then. Finally, after explanation, the sensible adviser said:

'Mr. Barr, you are nervous and worn out. You want sleep. Take my advice. Go to a hotel; eat a good supper; take a stiff glass of hot grog; get a good night's sleep; and come down here about nine o'clock to-morrow morning, and then we will do something. That's the best thing you can do. Campbell must be let alone, to night, at least.'

And Barr, per force, followed this wise advice,—omitting no part of it, as he himself declared. After a sound sleep, he arose a new man, full of confidence that his twenty-two thousand dollars were within his reach at last.

Promptly at nine o'clock, Barr was at the office of his detective friend, not in the least rebellious, but ready to be submissive to good counsel. He sat uneasily, and he winced—how could he help it—when Mr. Barry—calm and cool detective Barry—in reply to a strong hint that it was time to go for Campbell, said, "Don't you fret now, Mr. Barr. You've had enough of that."

At the end of an hour, Barry took his hat, and quietly remarked, "I guess it's about time to start." His companion was instantly upon his feet. "Let me see"—musing. "About the first place to go to. Campbell is a swellhead rascal, and affects Wall street. Let's go to Wall street, first; and see what we can find there. If he isn't about Wall street, we must try the hotels." And the two sallied forth.

They entered Wall street, and had not advanced twenty steps from Broadway, when they came plump upon the the fugitive, face to face. The moment Campbell discovered Barr, he hastened to seize that worthy person's right hand in both his own, and with the heartiest shake of a rejoicing man, poured out his assurance of unbounded delight at meeting his dear friend once more.

"The fact is," said the smiling Campbell, "I have been in the greatest worry about my leaving Richmond so suddenly, and without a word to you. I got letters from my house, that compelled me to leave instantly; and I was just on my way to a friend's office, to write an apology and explanation of the whole matter. But I am delighted to see you here. I can tell you the whole story, now,' &c., &c.

Poor, guilty, John Barr. How he wished he had not come to New York. What a fool he was to leave Richmond. And how mean and ungrateful, to have distrusted such a friend. It was all plain enough. Why did he not think that sudden business might have called this noble man away, unexpectedly? He was full of shame and abasement. He blushed and stammered, under his overwhelming sense of wrong and guilt, and was in a mighty pucker, when the calm voice of Barry startled him with a fresh alarm.

"Come, gentlemen, let us step in somewhere, and take something."

What should Barr do, in this strait? The detective would certainly explore his shameful distrust of the estimable Campbell, and the wicked purpose which had treacherously brought him to New York. In his desperation he tried one or two winks; but the imperturbable Barry was unintelligent as a stone. A manœuver to get near enough to whisper that all was right, and not to breathe a word about that twenty-two thousand dollars, was defeated. Somehow, Barry did not seem to appreciate the sweet reunion, nor Campbell's gushing; but moved on to the proposed taking of something, as though he was absorbed in that. And the nervous, trembling, humbled Barr had no help, but to follow. The three were presently seated in a quiet room, alone, whether the landlord took them in a very knowing way. Two of these customers he had seen, and knew, before.

'Well gentlemen, what will you have?'

Barr ordered whiskey punch—Scotch; but he had no hankering for it; just then. Brandy and water came for the other two. Now the cigars; and then, sip—puff—cha'. It was wonderful to see the satisfied twinkle in the eye of the detective, and the smiling and courteous ease of Campbell, contrasted with the fidgety anxiety of Barr. What should he do? Every moment he expected the terrible explosion to come. How could he explain his shameful distrust, so as to be forgiven by this dearly cherished and now so greatly and cruelly wronged friend? And out it came, at last, sure enough. When the supply of liquids number two, and cigars, were brought in, and the sip and puff were quietly in progress, Barry opened fire.

'Well, Campbell, you understand what we want of you. You have twenty two thousand dollars of Mr. Barr's money, and he wants it.'

As this thunderbolt came, Barr felt much like shooting from the room; but the answer of Campbell produced another revulsion, and a convulsion, in his tumultuous breast. The moment the detective made his speech, in a cold, measured, hard tone, Campbell's whole manner and mode of speech were changed.

'Look here, Barry. I have spent a whole year on this job, and it was a cursed poor one, at best. It is hard; but I suppose I must do something. I will give Mr. Barr ten thousand dollars, and not a cent more. That won't leave enough to pay my expenses, hardly.'

John Barr's eye glared. His Scotch blood was beginning to boil, and his fingers to play. He felt a sudden appetite for his beloved Campbell's throat. But he had been warned to keep silent and let things take their course; and Barry's voice recalled him, in season.

'Mr. Barr wants twenty-two thousand dollars,' was all the reply made by Barry.

'He won't get it, then. Just consider the time it has taken, and the expense.' This was put with the serious air of a sound business argument. 'I can't afford to give even ten thousand.'

'It is hard, I know. But you can't expect to win always, you know. Twenty-two thousand is the figure, and not a dollar less.'

'If you will say fifteen thousand, I suppose I will go that. But it is hard on me.'

'Twenty-two thousand, and now.'

'Then you may whistle for it.' This was said with a dogged air and tone.

'Look here, Campbell, you are no fool. You know you are caught, and if you won't help yourself out nobody else will. The case is exactly this. You can fork over the cash. If you won't, you have property that will bring it; but this will take time. Now Mr. Barr don't want to trouble you. He wants his money, and that he is sure of. The choice for you is to pay the cash, and make it up on another job; or go to the state-prison for years, and have the money taken out of you another way.'

'Blamed hard!' muttered Campbell.

'You must decide. Either pay the money down and go, or I arrest you on the spot. You understand my style, Now decide.'

Campbell swore in a mighty way over his ill-luck. The loss of so much time, and so much expense, seemed to weigh him down. But he paid John Barr twenty-two thousand dollars; Barr paid the detective five hundred of it; and he returned to Richmond, a richer and a wiser if not a happier man than he had been for the twelve months before.

Chip.

Chip led a very quiet life until the occurrence of the remarkable adventures which have made him famous. He was the third son of a Sand-Martin—one of that ancient family of Sand-Martins which has lived for generations in a hill overlooking the river Dee, in Cheshire. (An English family, of course.) Chip lived in a castle. Common birds build their houses of hay, or grass, or mud, and hang them on trees, of which they have but one year's lease. But the Sand-Martins all are of Norman blood, and dwell in castles hollowed out of the solid rock. The inside of Chip's family castle was quite half-a-foot wide, lined with soft material; and you entered it by a round sloping hall, two feet long, tunneled out of the yellow sandstone. Chip and his brothers were told by their mother every day that there was nothing finer in the world than this approach; and when they stood in the door of it, and looked down at their possession,—at the face of the rock, hung with weeds and moss, and the estuary below, sparkling in the sun, and the vast grey sea beyond that,—they felt like princes, indeed. They would have liked to fly about and travel over their kingdom, as princes ought to do, but were unable to do so on account of various robber bands of kestrels and sparrow-hawks that infested the country.

'Next year,' their father said, 'when we return from the South, you will be large enough to take care of yourselves.'

Their father was late that fall in taking them to the South. But they started at last. There were no trunks to pack, no tickets to buy, nothing to do but to dip their wings in the river one bright morning, and be off to Algeria.

But Chip was never to see Algeria.

That night he went out of the castle to look at their possessions by moonlight. It was disobeying his mother to go out of the castle by night. We have all often heard what instantly happens to boys or birds who disobey their mothers. A hawk swooped down out of a cloud and struck poor Chip in the back of the neck. He fell through the air, then into the water. When he came up, the hawk was gone. Chip fluttered up to shore. He was wounded and drenched; the salt water was in his eyes and throat; he could not utter a croak. He lay on the sand until daybreak. Then he saw his father and brothers, and his dear, fat, pudgy mother, flying wildly about, calling in search of him. They flew within a yard of him; but he could not give one single chirp so that they might hear. All that day they searched, and then, colder and more feeble than before he heard them talking together. They were quite sure that he was drowned in the Dee; there was nothing left for them to do but to go and leave him, dead, behind. Chip could hardly bear to look at his mother when he heard this. His father looked as if he had grown into a grey old bird with the grief of that day, and even his two brothers sat dumb and had forgotten to squabble or to eat. But they would forget him presently, and chirp and flutter about again.

But he knew that his mother would never forget.

Late in the day, they all slowly rose from the tree where they were perched, and circling solemnly once or twice about their old home, in sign of farewell, they flew in a straight line—four dark, swift, steady figures—direct to the South.

They were gone. Not one of them would be there to see him die. He was sure that he was dying now; his wings and little breast were cold beneath the feathers. As his eyes rested on the cloud where he had seen them disappear, a small black mote came into the threatening grey sky. It crossed the heavy thunder-cloud—came closer, fluttered uncertainly over him. It was his mother. She had come back to look once more for him. He lifted his wing and tried to call, 'Mother! mother!' But he made no sound. She hung a minute, poised motionless against the leaden heaven. Chip shut his eyes. It seemed to him as if he were asleep, warm in her breast again. When he opened them, there was only the great grey sky meeting the grey sea. She was gone!

'Hoy, hoy! What is this?' cried a voice just above him.

It was a loud, hearty voice. A little girl picked him up and held him to her face. It was a hearty face, with honest blue eyes. And her hand was as warm and firm as his mother's breast.

'Most dead! Tut, tut!'

She held him tight and ran with him. The next minute she plumped him down on a clean table in the middle of a warm kitchen.

'It's a martin—'most dead, fallen out of his hole! I found him just outside of my onion patch. So he's mine!'

'Very well, Jane,' said her mother.

She began vigorously to tie up his broken leg with rags, and to feed him with egg and crumb.

Chip stood up on his well leg and looked around him, with one eye shut and his head cocked to one side. The kitchen was bright and warm; Jane's red-cheeked mother kneading the bread was a comfortable sight to see; eggs and crumb were better than worms. But to call his kingdom an union-patch, and his castle a hole! What did she mean by that—hey? He swaggered up to her fiercely.

'Poor little mite!' said Jane. "Its mother must have worried for it sorely to-day."

She stroked him with her thick finger. Chip hid his head under his wing at hearing his mother's name, and kept it there all day.

But, in a week, Chip never left Jane's side. Did others offer even to give him food, they were pecked at by the bird and snubbed by the girl. She was hot-tempered, affectionate little body; but apt to hold a light grip on all her belongings. What was Jane's was Jane's; and, in her opinion, nothing could match it in the world.—St. Nicholas.

THERE is a growing aversion to manual labor among our American born citizens, and as a consequence hundreds of boys are being educated for the professions which are already overstocked, or for mercantile pursuits in which ninety out of every hundred fail of success. Nearly every young man who shirks labor and undertakes to get a living by his wits, does so at the cost of independence and in very many cases, of self respect. Thirty years ago farmers' sons were put to the plow as soon as they were old enough, and were taught that this was a most respectable and sure way of obtaining a livelihood. Now it is said of most boys that they are too feeble for manual labor, and so they are put to studying a profession or are packed off to the city to enter a store. This is all wrong. Moderate manual labor in the pure country air, is just what such boys want, to tone up the system and harden the muscles, while the worst place to send them is to the overcrowded city with its disease-laden air and bad morals.

It was noticeable that during the late war persons who were recruited from the stores and offices in the cities, after becoming inured to the hardships of camp-life, made the very best of soldiers. The pure air which they breathed night and day had a tonic effect, while the exercise was just what was wanting to brace up and invigorate the system.

Let boys follow the plow, swing the axe or sledge or shove the foreplane, and their cheeks will soon expand, and their confined lungs will speedily have ample room to play. Above all things, never encourage a sickly youth to study a profession or enter a store. None but the healthiest should enter these avenues of business, where success is never reached except by the closest application, and too often at the expense of a fearful wear and tear of the conscience. Stick to the farm young men if you would be independent and happy, or to some other form of manual labor in the useful trades.

Ironing Made easy.

BY MRS. W.

Good ironing of clothing is a fine art, and is acquired by patient practice, and the habit of doing all work conscientiously. In families where there are young girls, there is often much nice ironing to do; and it should never fall to the mother's charge, but should be done by those who require it, except in cases where servants are kept for that purpose; and it is always best for young ladies to know how to iron in the best manner. Nothing facilitates the habit of ironing as to have each one who irons possess her own ironing tools, such as holders, &c. In otherwise orderly families I have seen young ladies catch up almost anything that was conveniently near, to hold irons with; often scorching valuable articles not suitable for the purpose. Each ironer should have a bag, fifteen or eighteen inches square, to be suitably furnished and used only by herself. It should contain an iron-holder, of a size and thickness to suit herself, a few layers of newspapers in the middle make it lighter, and the hand will be less heated than if it is made wholly of cloth. Iron holders made of saw dust are the least heating to the hand. The saw dust should be nicely and thinly quilted into the holder; and to be just right, there should be two quite thin quilted holders tacked together, and then the cover put over both. Wood being a non-conductor to a great degree, the hand is not so injuriously affected by the heat as from the old-fashioned mettle-handle and a common holder. I wish some woman would invent a movable handle for flat-irons, which would be easily adjusted on taking an iron from the fire. Some woman whose husband is a blacksmith, and would make her models, perhaps might succeed. Each iron holder should have one or two covers of white cloth or light calico made to fit nicely, and should be fastened on with buttons or strings, then, when one cover becomes soiled it can be changed, and is far preferable to having several holders.

In the ironing bags, there should always be kept a thin, soft-leaved pamphlet, for rubbing the irons upon, when first removed from the fire; do not use the covers. Keep in the bag a nice soft cloth of a light color, to finish off the iron with, also a light tin ring for resting irons upon. A muffin ring is just the thing. Another smaller bag within the other should contain a small white cloth for rubbing specks from starched clothes, and a soft fine cloth for covering bosoms and collars if desired. It also saves much time and vexation to keep a wet towel near to wipe the hands when starching, instead of rushing across a room to wash them while doing starched clothes.

One should have a small ironing board for collars, cuffs, &c., a little larger than a handkerchief, and it should be covered with cloth and flannel.

To the upper corner of the board a strong string should be nailed to hang it up by, and a calico cloth should be attached to the top like the cover of a pamphlet, large enough to fall over both sides when hanging, to keep it from the dust, and should be confined closely around the boards by strings. With two such boards two can iron at the same table without interfering with each other, or could be carried to any part of the house and saves all the time usually lost by folding and putting away ironing things of large size, such as blankets and covers, which are often put away in a hurried and disorderly manner, to the vexation of the next one who goes to the ironing drawer or basket. These items seem small and insignificant, but attention to them will save much time and trouble, and render an otherwise tedious process, pleasant and improving to the ironers of the family, by cultivating habits of order and regularity, and a just regard for the comfort of others.—American Agriculturist.

THE credit of Pennsylvania, at home and aboard, is better at present than ever before, and State taxes were never so low as now. These results, achieved under successive Republican administrations, furnish an all-sufficient answer to the empty but incessant gabble of the Democracy concerning "Radical extravagance and misrule."

The juice of ripe tomatoes will remove the stain of walnuts from the hands without injury to the skin.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor

For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will present the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit, but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

No other Bitters in the universe can equal them. I lack space for detailing the availability of these Bitters, but will briefly state its general effects upon the human system, as follows:

It absolutely Purifies the Blood. It speedily corrects all morbid changes in the Blood. It equalizes the circulation of the Blood. It regulates the supply and quality of the blood. It prepares the Blood to furnish a proper support to all the vital properties. It enriches the constituents of the Blood upon which the vital energy of the system is dependent. It infuses the proper degree of animal heat in the system. It purges from the system the morbid humors which retard its natural functions. It imparts vitality and elasticity to every organ of the body. It corrects all derangements, however trivial, which are the first origin of Disease. It promotes the operation of the digestive organs. It improves the appetite and removes all disagreeable feeling after eating. It perfects digestion, rendering it natural and easy. It acts as a mild and efficacious stomachic. It elevates the standard of all the vital forces. It strengthens the nervous fibres and diffuses a calm throughout the nervous system. It destroys all morbid conditions of the mind. It disperses dullness and languor. It banishes those clogs upon pleasure which produce gloom. It drives away those distressing symptoms which rob us of happiness. It revives the physical energies by infusing new life and power into the system. It fortifies the system against the dangers of malaria, fluctuations of the temperature changes in the climate, &c. In short, it prepares the system for the radical change to be wrought in its condition, and restores it to perfect health and natural vigor.

THE ELECTION.

Although we have held our paper back in order to give our readers some idea of how the election has gone, yet the returns are so meagre that we are unable to give a very correct statement; but from present indications the Democrats have made very large gains, and the voting is so close in several states that we may well call them doubtful. For the returns from this county we refer our readers to our table in another column. The state has probably gone Republican by a small majority. Bill Mann of Philadelphia is defeated. The returns from New York, seem to indicate that the state has gone Democratic, but it is so close that the result will not be known certainly, for several days. Massachusetts, the ever faithful and true, is said to be doubtful, and the notorious Butler badly beaten Those Democrats in Centre county who hate Yankees, should now turn Republicans out of sheer spite. Suppose you try it once, gentlemen.

Rhode Island has gone solidly Republican. Little Rhodie is small but good.

Wisconsin elected a Republican legislature. Elections have been held in other States but at this writing we have no news worth mentioning.

Although the elections have gone somewhat against us, yet we should not feel disheartened. This result is due more to general apathy than "any other man." Had it not been for the carelessness of Republicans these states would have gone Republican as in the past. But it may be said this is poor comfort. Not at all; while we may admit that those Republicans who stayed at home were willing to see the ticket defeaded, yet they are Republicans and believe in the grand and living principles of Republicanism, and when they see the mischief which has been done, and the evil results that are sure to follow, they will come manfully up to the work again, and these states will wheel into line for the great presidential contest soon to come. The great principles of our party are right, and the right will prevail; so let us not forget that God reigns and the blood of our countrymen murdered in the South for opinion's sake cries to Heaven for justice.

Next week we will give a complete review of the situation with full returns

WHAT the Democratic party would do with the latest amendments to the Constitution may be inferred from the following frank avowal of opinion by Foster's Democrat, of Dover, N.H. That journal says:

"We were always opposed to the Fourteenth 'Amendment,' so called, to the Federal Constitution. In fact we never believed it to be an amendment in any just or reasonable or decent sense of the term. And all the new so-called 'amendments,' the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth, are alike in this respect—they were illegally adopted by force and fraud, which vitiates everything in the eye of law and justice."

The Democracy of the South are now attempting to nullify the Constitution and laws of the United States to the extent of armed rebellion. Let the Democratic party of the nation once obtain control of the Federal Government, and nullification will speedily become the rule throughout the country.

Notwithstanding that lotteries have been in favor from the earliest times, and great fortunes made by those who are willing to risk a little for the chance of getting much, there is a good deal said against them. And a good deal has been said against them, so that thousands who would like to take a chance are kept from it by the notion that it is not moral to make a fortune at one lucky stroke. Then there are so many bogus schemes offered, in which the tickets are blank, managed by unknown persons, in whom the public has no confidence, that a cautious man naturally hesitates before investing even a small sum.

Such prudent people now have a chance to try their luck in a magnificent scheme, where everything is fair, and the chances great. The Public Library of Kentucky will give its fifth and last gift concert at Louisville, on the 30th of November, 1874. Two and a half million of dollars in cash will be distributed in twenty thousand prizes, the highest of which is $250,000 cash. Whole tickets cost only $50, and a tenth of a ticket, or one coupon, $5. The concerts, of which this is positively the last, are under the management of Gov. Thomas E. Bramlette, of Kentucky, associated with other gentlemen of the hightest character and standing.

MESSRS EDITORS:—In your premium list of the fair, Oct. 28th, J. H. McClure & Son, have been credited with my work, which was one set of fine, gold mounted, rubber harness, and one set of heavy lumber harness. These harnesses were made by James Schofield, and not as reported by the Judges to be J. H. McClure & Son. It may be that J. H. McClure & Son do not wish to have the credit of my work; this is just what I want. I do not want McClure to have any credit for any thing I do, as all my work is made at home. Perhaps the moving of my harness by the Junior of the firm had something to do with the mistake that was made. Now the truth of the matter is this. When the Junior of this reliable firm was asked why he moved my harness, he answered he did not move them but the committee moved them. Now I exonerate the committee from such a charge which would seem to implicate them in a dishonorable act and charge it upon the Junior member of that firm. Now his own words will tell the story. When he came home to headquarters he said my work was in his place so he set them one side and "took his own place" as he expressed it, for his city made work. It will be seen by this that he, and not the committee is responsible for this act of questionable honesty. JAMES SCHOFIELD.

—"The Republic" for November now ready: Published by the REPUBLIC PUBLISHING COMPANY, Washington, D. C. Contents:—Undeveloped Resources of the Southern States; Alarmed at the Consequences of their Own Acts; General Butler on Southern Outrages; Speech of Senator Morton on Louisiana Affairs; The Political Outlook; The Decay of New Orleans. The New York State Republican Convention; Southern Outrages; The Central Territories of the United States; Political Conventions; Executive and Department News; Carpet-bag and Democratic Taxation Compared; The Promised Reform; Bourbon Democracy; The Way to Win; Political Calendar. Terms: Two Dollars a year. New volume commences January 1 1874. Now is the time to send in your orders.

TALMAGE'S PAPER.—The Christian at work (New York) ranks with the best of the religious weeklies. Dr. Talmage is its active editor, and his sermons are published exclusively in its columns. The terms, $3.50 per annum, cover everything, including postage and delivery of new premium, a "Portfolio of Twelve Gems," or a copy of Lanseer's "Twins." Without the premium it is only $3 per annum, postage prepaid, as above. Agents will find this a success.

—Church's Musical Monthly presents a choice selection of music this month. Mr. Mago's arrangement from Wagner's opera is a showy piece of music of piano writing and will delight good pianists, while to those of moderate ability it affords pleasant and profitable study. It is quite refreshing amongst the mass of commonplace songs, to find one so original and attractive as "When the Roses come again." It is one of Mr. Persley's best, and is well worth the attention of any singer. The two short pieces by Beethoven need no comment. Organists as well as pianists will find them very useful. Address John Church & Co., 66 West Fourth St., Cincinnati.

"La Creme de la Creme."—No.—of this musical periodical, published by J. L. Peters, No 599 Broadway, New York, has come to hand. It has been placed in the hands of one skilled in "divine art," and pronounced to be for advanced players a splendid affair. It is most tastily gotten up, and we do not know where any thing with the same amount of classical music can be had for the same amount of money. It is published monthly, at four dollars per annum; single numbers, fifty cents.

"Peters' Musical Monthly.—We feel that we are doing a favor to our readers by calling attention to this standard magazine, especially at the present time when our tables are flooded with the trashy productions of the immoral, sensational press, as it is a work every way fit to be introduced within the home circle. It is devoted to the publication of vocal and instrumental music, and can not but help to elevate and refine wherever this extraordinary magazine is introduced. We say extraordinary because it seems out of the usual way for a publisher to furnish his patrons with a monthly instalment of the choicest new music, worth at least $4,00, for the small sum of thirty cents.

"We wish the publisher every success which his enterprise so eminently deserves, for whether we regard the musical worth, or the cheapness of the magazine, it is not only the most useful, but the best of its class. Send thirty cents for a sample copy to J. Peters, 599 Broadway, New York."

THE three most distinctive features in the decoration of hats, or perhaps we might say four, are the feather bands, long ostrich plumes, wide soft reversible scarfs with fringed edges, and birds, blue-jays and red-breasts being the favorites, though the brown sparrows are not neglected, and doves for gray felt hats, are in the highest, and most exclusive demand of all. —Demorest's Monthly.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

GOLD 110¼

Business through the country continues exceedingly dull, with lower prices for nearly every commodity. Much of the out door work is now suspended and many work shops are either closed or working on reduced time. Business in the interior of our state must necessarily remain dormant until a revival shall take place at the seaboard, which makes the outlook very discouraging for the poor and middle classes during the coming winter. There is no doubt that the present prostration of business has been caused by an excess and reckless speculation so long as the American people continue to do business this way, periodical revulsions will be the result.

Grain and Flour Markets.

BELLEFONTE, Nov. 2nd, 1874.

The town millers are in full supply of wheat and it is very weak at our quotations. It is very doubtful if our quotations will be maintained in future. It seems that, so far as the the sale of flour is concerned, that our town dealers are bottled up. All the coal mines and towns on the Tyrone and Clearfield railroad are being supplied from the mills on the Penna R. R. east of Tyrone as well as some receipts from the west. The trade on the Philadelphia and Erie railroad is entirely cut off from this point, owning to the western shippers being able to supply the trade on through rates of freight. Old corn, rye and oats are firm at our quotations at which there is very little offering. Corn and oats are being brought from the west to fill up the vacuum. New corn is in liberal supply and the demand is not up to the present offerings. Some sales have been made on private terms, which are understood to be less than our quotations.

HAY AND STRAW.—Holders are rather tardy to sell even at the present exhorbitant price. The coal operators in the Osceola regions are now receiving their supply from Chicago for which they pay eighteen dollars per ton there and seven dollars per ton freight The hay is said to be of excellent quality.

Philadelphia Market Report.
Monday, Nov. 2, 1874.

REMARKS.—Trade continues light in all departments, with but little probability of any improvement during the balance of the season. A spirit of economy apparently pervades the masses in all sections, which, coupled with relaxation of great business enterprises, tend to depress all departments. There is not adequate employment for labor, and industry is everywhere paralized, but the resources of the nation are as abundant as ever, and our people possess remarkable powers of recuperation. By practicing economy and living within our means, capital and labor will ere long rise from their embarassed condition, and by their co-operation a brighter day will dawn upon the mercantile interests of the country.

WHEAT.—The market continues dull, and notwithstanding the disposition of the farmers throughout the West to hold back their supplies prices are 5@5c lower. The receipts have been moderate, but in excess of the demand, as the outward movement has been limited and the millers have purchased only for immediate necessities. For Spring Wheat it is impossible to give anything like the reliable quotations. Sales of 12,000 bus fair and prime Penna. and Indiana Red at $1,10@1,18; 2,800 bushels choice Ohio do at $1,20; 20,100 bus Indiana Amber at $1,20@1,25; 1,600 bus Delaware do at $1,17@1,20; 1,600 bus No. 1 Spring at 98c@$1; and 4,000 bus White at 1,28@1,32. Today the market closed inactive with sales of 400 bus Western Red at $1,17; 800 bus Ohio do at $1,12; 800 bus choice Indiana Amber at $1,25; and 400 bus Delaware do at $1,25; The Liverpool advices are again unfavorable. 26,746 bus were shipped to Liverpool per "Abbotsford." Receipts of the week 105,190 bus.

RYE—Comes in slowly. The last sale of Western was at $1,07. Receipts for the week, 6,600.

CORN—Supplies come in quite freely, but the inquiry is limited, and we are again compelled to reduce our quotations 4@5c. This concession caused more activity at the close of the week with some reaction in prices. Sales of 16,000 bus Penna. and Western Yellow at 81@85c; 5,000 bus new Western do at 70@76c; 3,800 bus new and old mixed at 80c; and 25,000 bus Western mixed at 81@86c—chiefly at 82@84c. Today influenced by limited receipts and a further advance in Liverpool, prices advanced 3c, with sales of 3,000 bus Penna. and Western Yellow at 86@87c; 2,000 bus do do on secret terms; 400 bus Western mixed at 85c; and 800 choice do do at 88c. Receipts for week 78,400 bus.

OATS—The receipts, though moderate, are in excess of the demand, and prices have been declined 3@5c. Sales of 33,000 bus Western White at 62c, down to 58c, and 2,000 bus light mixed at 58c, down to 55c. To-day the market closed firmer, with sales of 5,000 bus Western White choice, at 60@61c; 700 bus do do, fair at 58c; and 2,000 bus do mixed at 56@58c. Receipts for week, 76,000 bus.

OAT MEAL.—Commands former prices. We quote at $5,25@8,50 for Canada; $7,50@7,75 for Western and $6,75 per bbl for Penna.

BARLEY—There has been more doing, and fully 80,000 bushels Western and Canada sold recently on secret terms. We quote New York two-rowed at $1,25@1,30; do do four-rowed at $1,35@1,40; Western at $1,20@1,30; and Canada at $1,45@1,50. Receipts for the week, 83,000 bus.

BARLEY MALT—A moderate trade is doing; $1,40 to $1,65 is the range for desirable grades, with choice grades held at higher figures. Receipts for the week, 3,125 bus.

BUCKWHEAT—Is neglected.

BUCKWHEAT MEAL—Is quoted at $3,25@3,50—a decline.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

A MAN IN RUINS.—One of the saddest spectacles in the world is a human being shattered and broken down by the use of ardent spirits. But the damage may be repaired, the ruin restored to perfect soundness, by a course of that most powerful of all invigorants, Dr. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS. Beware of those "tonics" of which rum is an element. They aggravate disease and promote decay. 42-4w

MISSIONARIES and others so journing in foreign lands should not fail to take with them a good supply of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is the most reliable medicine for all purposes there is in the world.

Contagious diseases, such as horse sil, glander, &c., may be prevented by the use of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders. Persons traveling with horses should take note of this.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER now stands among the first, and at the head of all articles for a similar purpose. The testimony of our physician is conclusive as to it value and we are personally acquainted with scores of cases where it has been used with the best of results. It will restore gray hair to its original color, and leaves it glossy, and in a healthy condition; while, for heads troubled with dandruff, or any other disease of the scalp, it acts like a charm in cleansing water. Try it and you will not be disappointed.

Lowell Courier, May 2, 1868.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, FOR THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION COUGHS, AND COLDS.

The great virtue of this medicine is that it ripens the matter and throws it out of the system, purifies the blood, and thus affects a cure.

SCHENCK'S SEA WEED TONIC, FOR THE CURE OF DISPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, &c.

The Tonic produce a healthy action of the stomach, creating an appetite, forming chyle, and curing the most obstinate cases of Indigestion.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS, FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT, &c.

These Pills are alterative, and produces a healthy action of the liver, without the least danger, as they are free from calomel, and yet more efficacious in restoring a healthy action of the liver.

These remedies are a certain cure for Consumption, as the Pulmonic Syrup ripens the matter and purifies the blood. The Mandrake Pills act upon the liver, create a healthy bile, and remove all diseases of the liver, often a cause of consumption. The Sea Weed Tonic gives tone and strength to the stomach, makes a digestion, and enables the organs to form good blood; and thus creates a healthy circulation of healthy blood. The combined action of these medicines as those explained, will cure every case of Consumption, if taken in time, and the use of the medicines persevered in.

DR. Schenck is professionally at his principal office, corner FIFTH and ARCH STS., Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed 41-4t

The way men put off important matters to the last moment is one of the curious things in nature. The fifth concert in aid of the Public Library of Kentucky was advertised to take place July 31st. The day after, August 1st, Gov. Bramlette, the manager, at Lodavi le received over $60,000 for tickets. Had the drawing taken place at that time the Governor would have had to send this money back, but as the Concert was postponed to November 30th, it was all right with them. We presume that on the first day of December next, the day after the Concert thousands of dollars will be received, on day too late, for there will be no further postponement. This money might just as well have been sent a week before as when it was.

Indian Summer.

"There is a time just when the frost
Prepares to pave old Winter's way,
When Autumn in a reverie lost
The mellow daytime dreams away;
When summer comes with musing mind,
To gaze once more on hill and dell,
To mark how many sheaves they bind
And see if all are ripened well."

Late in the autumn of almost every year, after the frost has been here and laid his chilly hand upon the tender plants and flowers we have a period of warm and pleasant weather, varying in length from one to three weeks, which is characterized by a clear sky and a hazy atmosphere, especially near the horizon; when all around there is a peculiar stillness, very unlike the season of spring, when the sound of growing things is so distinctly heard and the music of the waterfalls and of the singing birds are every where heard. The conception of the fact that, at this season, summer returns for a brief period to review her work and see that every thing has "ripened well," and that the husbandman hae been rewarded for his toil, is a happy one.

At this season it was the custom of the aborignal inhabitants of this country to prepare for the winter by laying in a store of food. It was in this season that they harvested their corn and repaired their wigwams to shut out the cold blasts of winter. They believed that the bland weather was caused by a wind which blew directly from the courts of the south-western god. From these circumstances this pleasant season has been called the Indian summer.

The weather of last week, though rather early for Indian summer, was such as we usually have in that season. The clear blue sky indicated a peculiar transparent atmosphere, while a soft haze hung around the southern horizon like a curtain. There was something exhilerating, almost intoxicating, in the air, and a soft and genial warmth pervaded the whole, unlike that of any other period of the year. The forests this season have presented an unusually brilliant appearance. We have had no frosts to kill the foliage and the coloring has been the result of Nature's own process in ripening the leaves and in the chemical changes produced in the sap. The brown tint which is produced by frost, has been entirely wanting, and instead, we have a ground work of golden yellow. Upon this ground work we have seen painted the crimson and scarlet of the maples, relieved by the evergreens, presenting everywhere such bright glowing pictures as to excite our admiration and defy criticism. During last week there was perfect harmony between the varigated landscape, the bright sun and the balmy south-west wind, and toward evening the brilliant coloring of the clouds in the west made them a fitting retinue for the sun as he sank down into a pavilion of gold and purple. There is a glory in the declining year, such as belongs to no other season, and it is all the more impressive because it is the harbinger of the darkness and gloom and desolation of winter. But we are not left without hope, for the opening spring is also foreshadowed, and this depends for its life upon the processes of death and decay which we are now witnessing. It is one of Nature's unvarying laws; that "out of death comes life."

WORTH REMEMBERING.—Benzine and common clay will clean marble.

Castor oil is an excellent thing to soften leather.

Lemon juice and glycerine will remove tan and freckles.

A dose of castor oil will aid you in removing pimples.

Lemon juice and glycerine will cleanse and soften the hands.

Spirits of ammonia, diluted a little, will cleanse the hair very thoroughly.

Lunar caustic carefully applied so as not to touch the skin, will destroy warts.

Powdered niter is good for removing freckles. Apply with a rag moistened with glycerine.

To obviate offensive prespiration wash your feet with soap and diluted spirits of ammonia.

EXPLANATION AND ELABORATION

OF WANAMAKER & BROWN'S NEW PLAN.

1st POINT. "CASH."

Houses doing a credit business must provide for losses on bad debts, interest on long-standing accounts, capital locked up, etc. To bear such losses themselves would drive them out of business. Therefore a per cent. is added to the price of each article sold, to cover this leakage, and Cash Buyers whether they know it or not, really pay the bad debts and the interest on the long credits of the other customers!! Under the Cash Payment system one pays only for what he gets, and contributes nothing to a "Sinking Fund."

By this Radical Change we shall lose some of our customers no doubt, but we will gain ten where we lose one, the advantages being so great to all who can avail themselves of them. So we say

CASH THROUGHOUT.

Bring Money for Clothing, and we will supply it at prices possible under no other plan.

2d POINT. "ONE PRICE."

The fairness of this feature of our plan all will praise. It is simply treating all alike—exacting nothing from indisposition to bargain or ignorance, and, at the same time, conceding all that shrewdness on the shrewdest customer's part could possibly extort, because the "One Price" which we mark on our goods, shall invariably be

NOT the "First" Price, but the LAST and LOWEST PRICE.
NOT the "TOP" Price, but the VERY BOTTOM PRICE.

In other words, Salesmen or "Headmen," have never been allowed, under ordinary circumstances, to fall below a certain figure! It is at that, or at a lower figure that we now determine to mark our goods, calculating the cost to the exact penny, and fixing the price at the low minimum profit on which business on a large scale can be conducted.

We know that the larger business we aim for and anticipate, will require a large increase in the number of customers, and we shall therefore see to it that the "One Price" is based on the Smallest Profit, calculated to the exact and lowest penny, which will not be difficult to do with universal Cash Payment for the rule. The price will be marked in plain figures and no alteration allowed.

NOTE.—Whenever the exigencies of the season, the state of trade, or the money market may demand, the right is reserved to go through our stock before or after business hours and mark down any lot or lots of goods, changing the figures on all the labels, so that the new rates are the same to all, and all buy alike at the mark down prices.

WANAMAKER & BROWN WILL NEVER HOLD THEIR GOODS.

3d POINT. "Full Guarantee."

A printed Guarantee, bearing the signature of our firm, will accompany each garment as a Warrantee. This binds us in every sense, and will be honored as quickly as a good draft of the Government of the United States. This is a sample of the Full Guarantee, and tells its own story:

GUARANTEE.

We hereby guarantee

1st. That the prices of our goods shall be as low as the same quality of material and manufacture are sold anywhere in the United States.
2d. That the prices are precisely the same to everybody for same quality, on same day of purchase.
3d. That the quality of goods is as represented on printed labels.
4th. That the full amount of cash paid will be refunded, if customers find the articles unsatisfactory, and return them unworn and uninjured within 10 days of date of purchase.

[Signed,] WANAMAKER & BROWN,
OAK HALL,
Sixth and Market Streets, Phila.

DATE,.....

4th POINT. "Cash Returned."

This is simply a concession on our part to our customers, to secure them full confidence in dealing for goods they know very little about, and we thus prevent any occasion for dissatisfaction from any and every cause whatsoever. If the garment is not exactly what you thought, if your taste changes, if the "home folks" prefer another color or another shape, if you find you can buy the same material and style elsewhere for less money, if you conclude you don't need it after you get home, if the season changes suddenly and you wish you had not bought it, bring it back unworn and uninjured, and the full amount of money you paid will be returned on the spot. What more can we do for our customers than this, when we make our clothing so that they can draw the money value with it equally as well as with a check on the bank?

BOOK AGENTS WANTED

to sell the NEW BOOK TELL IT ALL

By Mrs. Stenhouse of Salt Lake City, for 25 years the wife of a Mormon High Priest. Introduction by Mrs. Stowe.

This story of a woman's experience lays bare the "hidden life," mysteries, secret doings, etc. of the Mormons as a "wide-awake woman sees them." Bright, Pure and Good, it is the best new book out, actually overflowing with good things for all. It is popular everywhere, with everybody, and outsells all other books three to one. Ministers say "God speed it." Eminent women endorse it. Everybody wants it: and agents are selling from 10 to 20 a day! 25th thousand now in press! We want 5,000 more trusty agents NOW—men or women—and we will mail Outfit Free to those who will canvass. Large pamphlets with full particulars, terms, etc. sent free to all. Address A. D. MEDICAL.

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

THE GREAT INDIAN DIURETIC.
INFINITELY SUPERIOR TO BUCHU.

Nine tenths of the human family suffer, directly or indirectly, at one time or other, from diseases or irregularities of the generative system, while the victims of indiscretion, and of quack treatment, are comparatively numerous.

The idea that patients cannot treat themselves successfully in these cases, has long ago been exploded. A good and reliable medicine, prepared by an experienced physician, from the original Indian Recipe, that is guaranteed to effect a can be as safely relied upon as the prescription of the most skillful practitioner. Such a medicine is the celebrated

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

Full directions accompany each bottle, and if they are carefully followed, a quick and permanent cure is guarranteed. Price $2.00 per bottle.

THE CHEROKEE INJECTION,

should always be used in conjunction with the Remedy for both incipient and obstinate cases of Gonorrhœa. Price $2.00 per bottle.

CHEROKEE CURE

for seminal weakness (spermatorrhœa), is a simple vegetable medicine that was used for many years in the practice of the physician who first gave the remedy to the public. It has effected cures that would scarcely be credited except on ocular evidence of the fact. Full directions, with pamphlet containing all particulars of symptoms, treatment, &c., accompany each bottle. Price $2.00 per bottle. Sold everywhere.

CHEROKEE PILLS.

These Pill are prepared expressly for the cure of those irregularities to which ladies are subject, and will be found safe, reliable and effectual, for the cure of Suppression, Green Sickness, Pain in the Back, Hysteria, Sick Headache, &c., &c. Price $1.00 per box.

Heimstreet's Hair Restorative,

OR INIMITABLE HAIR COLORING.

NOT A DYE.—Heimstreet's "Hair Coloring is not a Dye, and its operation is not by any chemical effect, but by a natural restoration of the glands, thus giving the hair the color it originally had.

NATURALNESS.—When the hair is dyed, its color is leaden hued and unnatural, but when restored by HEIMSTREET'S HAIR COLORING, its appearance is so perfectly natural that no one can detect the use of any Restorative.

STAINLESS.—While the Restorative acts promptly on the hair, it leaves no stain or mark whatever on the skin. It is composed of ingredients that form a perfect dressing as well as a coloring, so that no oils, &c., are necessary.

THIS MOST EFFECTIVE of all the Hair Restorers is for sale by all druggists at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Numerous certificates from those who have used it are in the possession of the proprietors.

PARK'S BALSAM
OR WILD CHERRY AND TAR.

BALSAM.—Nothing is more soothing to the irritated membranes than the pure BALSAMS of which this medicine is composed.

WILD CHERRY.—The true bark of Wild Cherry is an unfailing specific for all throat and pectorial diseases.

TAR.—The wonderful healing properties of Tar when united with the other ingredients, render PARK'S BALSAM the most efficient Cough Medicine ever offered to the public.

CONSUMPTION.—The many cases of Consumption that have been cured justify us in the assertion that it is the very best medicine for that disease ever discovered.

CERTIFICATES OF CURES.

STEPHEN FISK, of New York, says his daughter had consumption, and terbacles had formed in her lungs. He was induced to try Park's Balsam, which effected a speedy cure.

T. EDWARD FLEET, of Brooklyn says, I think it is the best medicine for affections of the lungs I ever used.

G. S. FANCHER, of New York says, I feel fully persuaded that Park's Balsam has saved my life.

We have in our possession hundreds of certificates from others, and all of the same cheering import. Price 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere.

EGYPTIAN
Rat and Vermin Destroyer

FOR EXTERMINATING RATS, MICE, WATER BUGS, ROUCHES, RED ANTS, &c.

STRENGTH.—When a Rat tastes the Egyptian Destroyer, his death warrant is signed, sure. It cannot fail to kill. It also creates great thirst, and the rat will search for water out of doors, and not die in his hole, to cause a stench that cannot be got out.

ATTRACTIVENESS.—Rats are the shrewdest of vermin. It is hard to get them to eat poison. An ingredient in the Egyption Destroyer is a perfect bait, and they are attracted rather than freightened be it. "Rats (not children) cry for it.

KEEPING SOFT.—People know how the ordinary Rat Pastes dry up and become useless, causing annoyance and loss. The Egyptian Destroyer is fully warranted to keep soft, fresh and effective in any climate for years.

SURE DEATH.—The Egyptian Destroyer kills every time. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials are now in the hands of the proprietors, substantiating its great merits as the best preparation for destroying Vermin in the world. Be sure and ask for the "Egyptian," and take no other.

Put up in large glass bottles. Price, 25 cts. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief space afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

AT PRIVATE SALE.

A valuable farm containing 215 acres, situate within one mile of Millesburg, and three miles of Bellefonte, at the junction of the Bald Eagle Valley and Snow Shoe railroads, near the depot, Schools, Churches, Post office, Mills, &c. The lands are FREE from STONE, level, well fenced, and under a good state of cultivation. A valuable vein of

LIME STONE ROCK

is on the farm, and a village is growing up around it, which gives a fair prospect of an increase in value before long. The Philipsburg turnpike runs through it for a distance of ¾ of a mile rendering a large strip on each side available for house lots, from which the entire price of the farm might be realized, lots having sold heretofore for $100 apiece. The farm is well watered, having water in all the fields, good wells at the house and barn with pumps all in good order. There also are 50 acres of good

PINE AND OAK TIMBER.

The land has a southern exposure and is therefore very early. There are two houses on the farm, both facing the turnpike. One containing five rooms on the first floor with Hall and five on the second and back Kitchen, with room over-head. Connected with this house is a good log barn, ice house and other out buildings. On the other side of the road is the other house containing eight rooms with good barn and out buildings. This farm could be divided into two parts, and will be if purchasers so desire, making one containing 150 acres with the large house, and the other containing 38 acres with the small house. ELAINE

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

——With this issue of the REPUBLICAN the subscriptions of our campaign subscribers expire. We hope our friends have been please with the trial they have given the REPUBLICAN and that we may now placed their names upon our books as permanent subscribers. We take the opportunity here to renew the offer made two weeks ago, viz: That all our campaign subscribers renewing and paying one year's subscription in advance, also all new subscribers and all old subscribers paying up all arrears and one year in advance, will receive the REPUBLICAN until Jan. 1876, in other words, two months (from now until Jan. 1875) FREE. We shall consider that it is the desire of the subscriber to have his paper continued if not notified to the contrary, and we hope our friends will call the attention of those of their neighbors who are not taking the REPUBLICAN to the above order.

——Somebody says that the best thing a farmer can do when he pulls off his boots is to fill them with oats. This grain has a great fondness for dampness and will rapidly absorb the last vestige of it from the wet leather. As it takes up the moisture it swells and fills the boots with a tightly fitting last, keeping its form good, drying the leather without hardening it. In the morning shake out the oats and hang them near the fire, ready for use the next night.

——Van Horn is an ingenious man, but he is apt to be impracticable. Several houses in our village have been robbed lately and the people generally have become very apprehensive of visits from the burglars. Van Horn determined to protect his dwelling effectually, and after a considerable amount of thought and labor he invented a machine which he named "The Burglar Annihilator." It consisted of a row of gun barrels rigged together with some bits of gas pipe and operated by some kind of a mysterious secret trigger with the peculiarities of which no one was acquainted but Van Horn. When the machine was ready he loaded the barrels to the muzzle with gunpowder and slugs and old nails and fixed it up just behind the front door, so that nobody could open the latter without being blown into vulgar fractions. The house was not robbed that night, and by the time morning came, Van Horn had forgotten how the secret trigger worked and was afraid to go near the apparatus for fear of exploding it. For four weeks the family was compelled to go out and in through the kitchen and during that period burglars ripped open Van Horn's window shutters eight successive times and held wild revels all over the house with perfect impunity, cleaning out all the valuables and never going near the front door once. Finally Van Horn's maiden aunt, from Willmington, came over to pay him a visit, and as she was not aware of the existence of the Burglar Annihilator she got to fumbling too ardently at the front door knob, whereupon the secret trigger was moved and the infernal machine poured a fearful volley through the panels. They carried her up stairs with four pounds of slugs and a couple of handfuls of tenpenny nails in her venerable legs, and the doctor thinks she will be a cripple for life. Van Horn has been studying the peculiar mechanism of that trigger ever since, and he says he thinks he sees now how it worked. He will explain it to anybody who will take the patent right off his hands, and pay for mining the metal out of his aunt's legs.—Ex.

BUY AT HOME!—Everybody complains of hard times and not without cause. Everybody trying to do business, feels the pressure more or less, and perhaps we have no more than our share here. Since there is so much stagnation in business it becomes all persons to consider what is best to be done. There is at least one thing all may do, and that is to encourage home trade. By going away from home you to make your purchases, you injure your own business by depressing the general business of your own town in a corresponding proportion.

If one man can go abroad to buy his goods, so can another, and this system, if carried out, would inevitable ruin the business of the town in a short time. People who do not encourage home trade should not complain of hard times; they have helped to make them so, by taking the business from their own town to other places. No one should say "all I buy would make no difference." Not so, each little drop helps to make the shower.

It often appears that persons take a dislike to some one of the business men, for real or imaginary cause—more frequently the latter, and then to be revenged on that man, they go elsewhere to deal, and thus injure the whole town more or less in proportion to the amount of money they carry away. If a man does not wish to deal with the business men of the place in which he lives, he would better leave for some place more congenial to his tastes and feelings.

It is our business as good citizens to support our own town if we have any regard for the welfare of the place. It is better for all concerned to buy at home, if we even should have to pay a small per cent. more than city cost. Such however is not the the case in Bellefonte. All manner of goods or work can be had as cheap here as any where else and just as good.

If we go to some other place to buy what we can obtain here, we cannot censure our neighbors for doing so, and the business community must suffer. Buy at home; encourage home business in every respect, and you will then have less cause to complain of hard times.

PROBABLE FATAL ACCIDENT.—One of those unfortunate occurrences that happen so often during the hunting season, took place near the hunting camp of a party composed of Adolph Laporte, of Spruce Creek, Good Merrill and Dick Swartz, of Kylertown, John Douglas, of Morrisdale, and Hobart Allport of this place, a few miles from Kylertown on Thursday. The information reaching us is vague and uncertain, but it appears that Laporte, seeing Douglas' head above a clump of bushes mistook him for a wild cat and fired his rifle at him, the ball taking effect in his right temple and passing out at his left. Dr. Potter, of this place, was summoned to Kylertown, but returned on Thursday evening without having seen the injured man, as he had not yet been brought from camp. He went to Kylertown again this—Friday—morning but has not returned at the hour of going to press, so we can give no statement as to the unfortunate hunter's condition.—Journal.

——Mr. Thad Hamilton, the well known tobacconist, has removed to Philadelphia to take charge of the lumber agency of Messrs Geo. W. Hoover & Co., of Philipsburg. Mr. Hamilton still retains the proprietorship of his tobacco store in the Bush House block.

——The borough council at a late meeting passed a resolution allowing shade trees to be planted outside of the curb on all streets of fifty feet or more in width. This is a most excellent provision and we hope no property owner will neglect to act on the wise suggestion.

——Alice Anderson, the Bellefonte servant girl who was reported to have fallen heir to a fortune of $250,000 in Pittsburgh, has proved herself innocent. The fortune was a myth and she a victim of misplaced confidence. This information we have from the family in which she last resided.

——The shaft which is being sunk by Messrs Kendrick & Co., two miles from Houtzdale, on the line of the proposed extension is fifteen by twenty-two feet, and will reach a depth of over fifty feet. —It has been already driven to a depth of twenty six feet, engines have been put up for hoisting and pumping and the work is going on rapidly. The firm has leased six hundred acres of coal land, containing some five millions of tons of coal in a six foot vein. They intend making a large operation of it.—Journal.

——A meeting was held at the Bush House on Wednesday evening last, for the purpose of organizing a company to stock Spring Creek and Logan's Branch with trout. Mr. Samuel Van Tries, presided. An interchange of views was had as to the best mode of stocking the streams. On motion of Gov. Curtin, Messrs George Valentine, E. M. Blanchard, D. H. Hastings, Jas. H. Rankin and Jacob Valentine were appointed a committee to prepare a plan of organization and report at an adjourned meeting to be held at the Bush House on Saturday evening.

Exercises for the evening will be announced at the close of the p. m. session. A large audience is expected; punctuality is earnestly requested. "Come with us" and share the promised Bible blessing.—D. S. Keller.

REC. SEC.

——D. W. Butler, the man who kept what was known as the "Hole in the Wall," has come to grief. He opened out rather boldly and his saloon bore a bad name from the first. In fact he was compelled to vacate the basement of the Williams House, but he was not discouraged and rented a room two doors above and continued business until Tuesday when the constable served some papers on him requesting him to call on a Justice of the Peace. He obeyed the summons and the result of the interview between him and the Justice was a trip to Bellefonte the next day, on the part of Mr. Butler who took a constable along for protection. He would not have made the journey, only he could not at the time find a man in town to go upon a bail bond to the amount of three hundred dollars. He is charged with selling liquor without license, selling to minors, and keeping a gambling house.—Journal.

——Captain Isaac Lytle, an attorney of this place, was arrested on last Friday, by an U. S. marshal on the charge of forgery. He was taken to Williamsport on Friday evening and had a preliminary hearing on Saturday, and was committed in default of $3000.00 bail. It appears that Mr. Lytle has had considerable to do as a pension agent, and the charge on which he was arrested is to the effect that he forged pension papers on one Grimes, a colored soldier of the 49th Regt. Pa. Vol., and attempted to draw the money due on it; Grimes previously had his papers adjusted and had drawn his pension. Alleged forged papers made Grimes a member of Captain Henry Montgomery's company, 149th Regt. and Capt. Montgomery's name was forged to the paper.

This is the rumor, and we have nothing definite about the affair further than the above. We believe and hope there is some mistake about it and that Capt. Lytle will be able successfully to refute the charges that led to his arrest.

He served with credit though the war and rose from the ranks to the command of his company. He is as free, open hearted and clever a man as can be found, and hitherto has maintained a good reputation. We repeat that we think there must be some mistake about the charges made against him and that he will prove himself innocent.

DUFF'S MERCHANTILE COLLEGE.—The name "Duff" is synonymous with the very idea of book-keeping in this community. Over thirty-four years ago this highly successful Institution opened its doors for the education of young men in the science of book keeping, &c. Since that time hundreds, hailing from all sections of the country have graduated from the College, until the name of "Duff" has become engrafted on the minds of almost every business firm throughout the Union.

Duff's System of Book-keeping, published years ago by Harper Bros., and subequently republished, until many editions have appeared, is still acknowledged as the best work of the kind ever offered to the public. It has been adopted as the standard throughout the country, and its completeness is confessed by all who have used it.

The Messrs. Duff have brought to its management a thorough understanding of general business. We would advise our readers to write for circular to P. Duff & Sons, Pittsburgh, Pa.

——The election, yesterday, was decidedly interesting in this Borough. The five districts that vote at the Court House kept a crowd of people about the diamond all day.

There was no excitement, no disturbances, nothing but the usual bustle and button-holing. This being the first general election under the new constitution there was necessity for an unlimited amount of explanations of the new election law. A number of voters, particularly in the South ward, had not been registered, and a number were debarred from voting on account non-payment of taxes The full vote of neither party was polled. The peculiar feature of the day was the unprecedented amount and variety of the "cutting." Few "straight" tickets were voted. But the fusion was so general that there was no marked effect on the result. The result in the borough appears to indicate that it was an injudicious measure for our party to run but one Legislative candidate. Alexander here ran better than his most sanguine friends expected. The returns however show him defeated by from one thousand to fifteen thousand.

——We thought that everything that it was possible to say about "hash" had been said, but here is another contribution: A certain hostess, whose table is noted for its uniformity of dishes, had a brisk daughter who electrifies her ma's boarders with the following parody sung to an accompaniment on a new fifty-dollar piano: "While beefsteak and venison costs lots of cash, be it ever so gristly, there's nothing like hash the scrapings and leavings of no use elsewhere, when mixed altogether make excellent fare. Hash, hash, good meat hash! Be it ever so gristly, there's nothing like hash! A stranger from home, hotels dazzle in vain; O, give me cheap eating house food that's more plain; the waiter who gayly re-echoes my call for a nice plate of hash or a single fish-ball.

Why, Shaffer, that's nothing down here; the times are so hard that we have to make many of our own words, as an economical measure.

SANFORD'S OLD-TIME MINSTREL are coming, Saturday evening, November 7th. This justly celebrated minstrel troupe will give one of their first class entertainments at Reynold's Hall. We copy the following in relation to this troupe from the Washington Republic: "Standing at the door and looking down the aisles one was reminded of a silver cloud, for a majority of the audience was composed of old men and women, those who were delighted with minstrelsy more than thirty years ago. There on the stage was genial, simon pure Sam. S. Sanford. His only living contemporary is Eph. Horn, the great John Diamond having died in Philadelphia in 1857. Thirty years ago they were on the stage singing Cynthia Sue, Julian Johnson, Old Dan Tacker, De Ole Gray Goose, Lucy Neal, and Sing, Darkies Sing, and last night's plaudits rang out as the veteran Sanford produced Nelly was a Lady, Uncle Ned, The Swanee River, Dandy Jim, the Floating Snow, and Cabin Life as it was Thirty Years Ago. This real genuine treat should be enjoyed by all, the young as well as the old. Sanford's negro is as great in its way as Jefferson's Rip Van Winkle, or Charlotte Cushman's Mez Merrilies.

BELLEFONTE ACADEMY—NOW SCHOOL IN THE MOUNTAINS.—It is purposed by the Principal and class of 1874 to hold a Semi-Centenary Reunion at the Court House, on the 10th inst., at 7 o'clock P. M., which will include all the pupils, (male and female) who have attended this venerable Institution from its organization to the present day.

An address will be delivered on that occasion, by Alfred Armstrong, Esq., of Washington City, Principal of the class of 1824, which will be commemorative and historic of the events of that period, and from his known ability as an elocutionist and his high attainments in literary persuits, a rare intellectual treat may be anticipated. An address of welcome will be given by Jas. McMannus, Esq. They will be followed by a number of distinguished speakers, most of whom were students, such as Gov. Curtin, Judge Linn and others. The entertainment it is hoped and expected, will be an interesting one to all who may be present. A cordial invitation is extended to all the citizens of Bellefonte and vicinity.

There will be an Alumni dinner in the Bush House, at three o'clock in the afternoon to which all the Alumni are cordially invited without further notice. By order of the Committee ——Much money is expended annually for schools, and yet but little is accomplished to what might and should be. Inefficiency of teachers may be one cause, but inefficiency of home discipline is by far the greater hinderance to progress in our schools. Parents should manifest more interest in them and the pupils. Where parents have little or no interest, scholars will have about the same, and teachers, though often ardent in the commencement, seeing their work unappreciated and accomplishing little, soon tire of their employment and turn their attention to better appreciated labor. Weary mothers, and even domestic servants, know how a word of sympathy from those we are working for lightens labor. Tired, over worked mothers did you never realize the relief that a loving husband or a grown-up son's sympathy gave you? Then why not have a sympathetic feeling for all well-meaning school teachers? Parents and teachers should be united, and parents especially should have more interest in the cause of education. They should meet often and converse on school topics and there should be a hearty co-operation of parents and teachers. Parents should visit the schools often, not to find fault, but to correct what is wrong and commend and appreciate where it is due. Should you perceive a fault in the teacher injurious to the school, go to the teacher and to the teacher only, and nine cases out of ten, the correction will be gladly made. Be careful and not mention a teacher's faults before the children. The most devoted teachers are liable to err. Many parents are thoughtlessly unconscious of the harm it does, and often destroy much good which might be accomplished could they but be careful on this point. By pursuing the above course, a good school may not be injured and a poor school may be bettered.

——Well regulated Bellefonte retires about ten o'clock. Such was the case with a High street family on Monday evening; but the parent tarried elsewhere. He spent the election evening in discussing the morrow's politics, till past the witching hour when goblins dance and ghosts make merry. It was an unusual thing for him to do and the playful wife and blithesome daughters resolved to jar the old gentleman's nervous system. They dressed up a figure of the genus "atracious villian" and set it upright on a chair before an open and rumpled-up drawer of a bureau, in the parental dormitary. The mother then retired, leaving the gas burning just enough to distinguish the inanimate object. The girls concealed themselves within one of the closets of the apartment, a friendly crack in the door affording them a fair bird's-eye view of the scene of the approaching tragedy. The father arrives, somewhat overcome with ratification liquids. As he enters, he starts, stares and ejaculates, "A burglar! I'll shoot you if you budge an inch." The burglar obeyed orders. The paternal heart beats fast, and paternity itself retreats into the hall-way to recover breath and decide on a plan of action. Clenching his fists and inflating his corpus-habeas to its utmost tension he musters courage enough to decide upon boldly dashing in to throttle the marauder and heave him head foremost out through the window. And bravely did the old boy carry out his resolution. With one bound he was behind the prowler. Fastening his fingers with a death grip on the scoundrel's jugular he gave the thieving wretch a fearful tug out of the chair and without ado, slung the miserable carcass out of the window then with the remark, "you Modoc, I'll show you what the straightouts can do" he spread his palpitating hands on the window sill and fiendishly awaited the death thug of his descending foe. The tall a new-style bonnet would have created as great a concussion as did the contact of that thief with Mother Earth. The old boy is aghast—looks askance over his shoulder. The bed sheets are shaking and some commotion in the closet is audible, Light dawns. He reflects, "These Modocs are a hoax, I was afraid they'd give us flugence to-morrow, and I was 'most dead with fright when I saw this fellow rummaging my bureau; but when I nabbed him he choked like a pillow-case and when I sent him straight out the window, he dropped like a sponge. I'm scared worse than if every Modoc'd been elected." He looks at those girls and that wife and then calls aloud—"Very well done my dears, your poor old father's scared 'most to death and you rascally Modocs have done it all. Tableau.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS.—Three years ago Dr. Boshee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States from Germany for the cure of Coughs, severe Colds settled on the breast, Consumption and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs. No medicine ever had such a success, 300,000 sample bottles have been distributed every year for three years by druggists in all parts of the United States, and nearly 1000 letters from druggists are now on our files, saying that no other preparation in their stores sells as well and gives such excellent satisfaction. All we ask is for you to go to your druggist, F. Potts Green, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it; regular size 75 cents.

DR. JACKSON, M. D.—Dr. Jackson, late of Erie, Pa., now of Angelica, N. Y., can be consulted for one week, commencing Wednesday, November 25, at Garman's Hotel, Bellefonte. Also for one week at the Loyd House, Philipsburg, Pa., commencing Wednesday, Dec. 2. It is hardly necessary for us to say anything in commendation of Dr. Jackson's ability and success in the treatment of all chronic diseases. His immense success heretofore with all cases placed under his charge is a sufficient guarantee to all. We publish below a certificate of a very remarkable cure of Pulmonary Consumption.

I, Theodore Emmens, do hereby certify, that my wife was suffering from Pulmonary Consumption for some years. She was treated for several years by three different physicians, who failed to help her in the least, and gave her up as hopeless. She is now well and hearty, having been completely cured by Dr. A. C. Jackson. THEODORE EMMENS.
